Eco Villa Lux, St. John's US Virgin Islands

Rumored to open for special programs and events in July, the pink villa at Rendezvous Point, or "Eco Villa Lux," in St. John's is a luxury retreat and inspirational oasis that showcases sustainable products for the hospitality design industry.

"The villa is an example that eco-friendly and luxury can exist in harmony," said Mr. Wickrema, a frequent visitor of the US Virgin Islands for more than 20 years. St. John's was chosen for the project because it is the island least commercialized. Further, it boasts tropical national parks, preserved archaeological ruins, and a protected marine habitat. "It's serene, beautiful, and sensitive to wild life," said Wickrema.

Naturally, the villa's interior emulates its paradise location, and Wickrema's passion to "go green" is evident, even in his choice for vanity mirrors and light fixtures.

Illuminating four of the villa's guestroom baths are custom lighted mirrors and mirror TVs by Electric Mirror, each with low-mercury, long-life lamps. In addition, the villa showcases Electric Mirror's "EnergyLite" technology that uses half the energy while producing greater light output.

Wickrema first experienced an Electric Mirror lighted mirror TV while staying at the Atlantis in Paradise Island, Bahamas last year. Later he met Electric Mirror at the Hospitality Boutique show in Miami.

When considering a lighted mirror and mirror TV for the villa, "We did our research and Electric Mirror was the best of the best," said Wickrema. "The quality of the finished product and the professionalism of their team was fantastic."

The Eco Villa Lux plans to host cooking shows, green educational conferences, wellness programs, executive retreats and the like. Visit www.harithproductions.com to learn more about the villa's accommodations and sustainable design.
